I'm human

Crossdresser makeup guide

As a crossdresser, I've learned that mastering the art of makeup is essential for boosting confidence and creating an effective look. In this tutorial, I'll guide you through my step-by-step process for a quick and easy makeup routine, perfect for beginners and advanced users alike. Before applying makeup, it's crucial to prepare your skin. This includes hair removal, shaving, and moisturizing. I recommend using an oil-free moisturizer to keep the skin hydrated while preventing excess oil buildup. Good lighting around the mirror is also vital for a flawless application. Next, apply a foundation that matches your skin tone to even out your complexion. Use a primer to help the makeup stay in place longer and create a smooth finish. I personally prefer a hydrating primer to keep my skin looking healthy and radiant. Use concealer to cover up any blemishes or dark circles under the eyes. I also apply contouring powder to define my cheekbones, nose, and jawline for a more angular look. Line your upper lash line with a liquid eyeliner and smudge it slightly to create a softer look. Apply mascara to define your lashes and add volume. Apply a light eyeshadow all over the lid to act as a base, then add a medium-toned eyeshadow on the crease to create depth. Use a fluffy brush to blend the edges seamlessly. Finally, apply a soft pink blush to the apples of your cheeks for a healthy glow. Line your lips with a pencil and fill them in with a lip liner that matches your natural lip color. Apply a gloss or lipstick that complements your skin tone for a pop of color. Finishing touches include setting your makeup with a setting spray to ensure it lasts all day, and adding any final details such as false eyelashes or individual lashes. Firstly, get your skin ready for makeup by moisturizing to avoid razor bumps and priming it so that your makeup stays all day long. Apply primer all over your face, including under the chin, and let it sit for a bit before adding more makeup. Then, use Beard Cover on the lower part of your face, but don't put too much on since you'll still need to apply foundation over it. If needed, just dab some concealer on specific areas with discoloration. Next, apply a cream foundation all over your face, including your eyelids. This will serve as a base for your eye shadow and make it stick better. It should leave your skin looking smooth and even, ready for the next steps in your makeup routine. After that, you can get creative with your eye shadow - try blending different colors together for a unique look. Moving on, apply eyeliner carefully, starting with the lower lid first. As you get more comfortable with it, try adding top eyeliner and experimenting with cat-eye looks. Once you've got the hang of eyeliner, move on to applying Fake Eyelashes and Mascara. If it's your first time using false lashes, consider starting with mascara instead. After that, apply a generous layer of loose translucent antiperspirant powder all over your face, making sure to cover everything evenly. This step is crucial in keeping your makeup in place throughout the day. It also helps minimize the effects of sweating by ensuring your foundation stays put. Finally, get ready for the final touches - apply Blush or Bronzer to enhance your natural color. Contouring should be done before blush, and bronzer should go just below your cheekbones while blush goes above it on the apples of your cheeks. Finish off with a lighter-colored powder under your eyelids and on the middle of your chin and forehead. Remember to blend well, especially around the outer parts of your face near your temples and upper forehead. Add some colour to your cheeks by smearing a bright blush on the apples of your face. Next, line, paint or gloss your lips generously and blend them together for a smooth finish. Don't forget to stock up on cleaning supplies like special wipes or baby oil to take off all that makeup at the end. With these steps under your belt, you'll be a pro in no time!